Arizona Daily Star says "Brown is one of Denver's top-rated and funniest stand-ups".

Jay was the featured performer at the Comcast/Comedy Central Laugh-Off at the Budwesier Events Center and has performed in comedy clubs and other venues in thirty one states. On television, he has played Sir Isaac Newton on "Encounters with the Unexplained", and has had starring roles in twelve regional plays, including a stint as Linus in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown". Jay's act is a unique combination of pure standup and musical comedy, and his "Theme Songs of the Rich and Famous" has been called the "best musical bit in comedy today."
